Railroad Rumors. Yesterday's Boston Advertiser, under the caption "The New Line to New York," says: A dispatch from New York on Saturday af ternoon stated that President Bliss had not yet closed the bargain with the Vanderbilt people for the new line to New York, but there is no reason to doubt a favorable issue of the negotiations. The distance from Springfield to New York by the proposed line will be four miles shorter than by way of Hartford, and will have few curves and of Hartford, and will have few curves and easy grades. It is expected that trains can be run between Boston and New York inside of five hours and three-quarters. The New Haven and Northampton, or Canal road, as it is called, is now a single track extending from New Haven to Williamsburg, and by its new branch to Turner's Falls and Bardwell's Ferry on the Turnel line. It has a continuous new branch to Turner's Falls and Bardwell's Ferry on the Tunnel line. It has a capital of $2,500,000 and a debt of $3,000,000. It earned last year a dividend of four per cent., which was not, however, declared. It has, in fact, boen the policy of the owners for several years to turn the profits of the company to the improvement of its property. The stock is mainly in a few hands, the largest owner being Joseph Sheffield, of New Haven, founder of the Yale Scientific school, and it is new in the market. It is probably held at something below par.

Concerning the rumor that the Consolidated is thinking of abandoning its use of the Grand Central depot and of entering the city by the way of Second avenue, an associated press dispatch of yesterday says as

It is rumored that the New York and New It is rumored that the New York and New Haven Railroad company has recently been privately negotiating with the Manhattan Elevated company for a connection into this city over the projected bridge at Second avenue and Harlem river. It is said the New Haven company will probably extend its independent line from Port Morris to the river this spring in order to make this connection. The project has advanced considerably of late, owing to rumors that Vanderbilt has become largely interested in the Boston and Albany road's opposition to the New Haven company.

Yesterday's Hartford Conrant says: "Although there is nothing yet in the shape of authoritative information, there appears to be good ground for the report that the Boston & Albany railroad is to dissolve its connection with the Consolidated road in running through trains between New York and Boston. However, as two years would be required to effect the revolution on the plan proposed, residents of this section need have required to effect the revolution on the plan proposed, residents of this section need have no solicitude on the subject, and so long a period as two years may witness the upsetting of the new scheme, or its material modification. The Springfield Republican and the Boston papers, have given much space to the matter, and appear to have derived their information mainly from the officials of the Boston and Albany road, which has recently fallen under new management. The new Boston and Albany road, which has recently fallen under new management. The new route proposed contemplates a track from Springfield westward to a connection with the New Haven and Northampton road at Southwick; thence to New Haven, and by a new parallel road to White Plains, New York, on the Harlem road, by which the trains will reach the Grand Central depot. According to current reports, a principal in the reported change is the railroad magnate, William H. Vanderbilt. This gentleman is a stockholder in the Consolidated road to the amount of a million dollars or so, and he also con-

H. Vanderbilt. This gentleman is a stock-holder in the Consolidated road to the amount of a million dollars or so, and he also controls the Harlem road, through its lease to the New York Central. The story is that Mr. Vanderbilt has been dissatisfied with the managers of the Consolidated road because of the facilities afforded the New York and New England road for bringing its freights over the road from Harlem to New Haven. This freight business, coming from the Pennsylvania Central road, it is reported, was regarded by Mr. Vanderbilt as an encrosehment upon the New England traffic of the New York Central road.
